What is the Act

The Freedom of Information Act 2000 aims to produce a culture of openness in public bodies, by providing members of the public with the right to access information held. The main purpose behind this is to show how public money is being used. GP practices, although not government owned, are considered to be "public bodies" for the purposes of this Act. Therefore members of the public (not necessarily patients) can request information from them. This right came into force in 2005. GP practices are required to make information available via a "publication scheme". This may be held in paper form or by electronic means. It will include information commonly requested and is available on request. The practice's publication scheme follows the model scheme for GP practices approved by the Information Commissioner.

FEES The information contained in the publication scheme are available at no charge. In some circumstances, a fee may be charged for the provision of information, and the classes of information incurring a fee are listed in the publication scheme document. Please ask reception for a copy

How Up to date is the information.

The practice complies with the principles of the Freedom of Information Act, and as such updates the publication scheme document on at least an annual basis, and at other intervals during the year if significant changes occur. The publication scheme itself will contain the date of the latest update.

What Sort of information is Available?

*Fees and charges *Format of the publication scheme *Information held by the practice (with some exceptions) *How information requests are processed *Details of the practice, structure, and relationship to the NHS *Services provided *Financial and funding information *Regular publications and public information *Complaints policies and procedures *General policies and procedures
